Programme

4pm – 5.30pm at St Peter's Primary School

This session is the third of termly subject leader update meetings which will take place across the year. It will provide suggestions for how to improve teaching and learning in Reading and opportunities to share successful practice with colleagues.

This session will cover:

Focus: Developing written comprehension skills

1. Understanding written comprehension as a specific and challenging skill which needs clear modelling.
2. Developing a sequence of teaching reading that builds towards written comprehension.
3. Different types of written comprehension questions and how to teach them.

We will also discuss the 2017 SATs reading papers – please be prepared to discuss how your pupils found these papers, particularly in comparison to 2016 and the impact of any changes made in response to the 2016 outcomes.

There will be further sessions next year covering relevant up to the minute developments in English and providing opportunity for delegates to share practice. The specific dates for future sessions will be arranged with members of the group.

Nikki Charlesworth is the deputy head teacher at St Peters C of E Primary School, an Outstanding school in Brentwood, Essex. The school specialises in developing innovative ways to deliver the curriculum and to develop teaching and learning. She is responsible for the curriculum and developed the school's successful and engaging system. Nikki currently teaches a year 3 class but has taught across all year groups. She has supported the development of teaching and learning in a range of local schools and led training on outstanding provision. Before moving to Essex, Nikki worked as an AST and senior leader in inner city Birmingham, developing practice in schools in challenging circumstances.
